CLASSIFICATION OF OCCUPATIONS

EIGHTH CENSUS OF CANADA, 1941

INTRODUCTION

The Classification of Occupations prepared for use in the Eighth Census of Canada, 1941, and presented in this volume is based on the dual classification of the gainfully occupied population. According to this principle, every person 14 years of age and over will be classified separately as to occupation and as to industry.

Application of the dual classification requires the clear distinction between a person's occupation and his industry and the separate enumeration of each. Occupation is personal to the individual, it is his particular contribution to the productive process. Industry is the field of activity in which he carries on his occupation, it gives him his position in the economic structure of the country. Occupations are carried on in industries and industries themselves are units of production. The one may give a clue to the other but more frequently it does not. Thus "carpenter" alone gives no indication of industry and "railway transportation" alone tells nothing useful concerning occupation.¹

Hence the necessity for two separate classifications of the gainfully occupied in the population census. The one is known as the Classification of Occupations and is presented in the present volume. The other is known as the Classification of Industries and is given in a separate volume. The two are complementary and both are necessary to the statistical presentation of the capacities of the country's gainfully occupied population.

The Classification of Occupations presented in the following pages is based primarily on type of work or function performed, expressed in such terms as material worked in, process performed, service rendered, and in some instances of product made. While the last (product made) is more commonly the basis for a classification of industries it has been found preferable not to exclude it altogether from a census of classification of occupations. This is partly due to the fact that the entries on the census schedules are not uniformly definite, and partly because of the unequal degree to which the division of labour has been carried in the different plants in the same industry or as between industries. Hence, the existence of such classes as "Cabinet and furniture makers", etc. within the framework of the classification of occupations. When, however, titles such as "Other Occupations in (the manufacture of) Clothing and Textile Goods", ". . . Wood products", etc., are used, they include as a class only persons (not elsewhere classified) actually engaged in the manufacture and repair of clothing and textile goods, wood products, etc., as the case may be, and do not include those employed in these industries whose work is not directly related to the manufacture of the product, as e.g., maintenance machinists, truck drivers, stenographers, etc.

Grade or degree of skill has been taken into account in the setting up of the occupations classification so far as this is practical within the limits of a census. Under each Main Occupation Group appears a class of owners and managers followed by a foremen class and then a selected list of skilled and semi-skilled occupation classes. The range of skill within the last—excepting certain primary occupations and a few predominantly low-skilled—thus covers in the main the skilled, the intermediate skilled and the operative workers. The remainder, consisting mainly of labourers and unskilled workers outside the primary industries, have been excluded from the occupation classes and collected, regardless of industry, to form the residual class “Labourers (not agriculture, fishing, logging, or mining)”.

For convenience the occupation classes have been arranged under the Main Occupation Groups listed on page 13. While the names of these main groups except for the addition of “Clerical”, “Labourers” and “Homemakers” correspond to those used in the Classification of Industries, the occupations under each have been listed alphabetically, since even an occupation characteristic of a given industry may be followed in widely different industries. What is important is that every “Carpenter”, for example, whether employed in a construction, manufacturing, trade, or other industry will in the occupational classification be assigned to the same class.

The 214 classes that make up the Classification of Occupations consist essentially of a revision and condensation of the 398 classes of the 1931 Census. This condensation is confined largely to the manufacturing section, where the various “Owners and Managers” and “Foremen and Overseers” classes have been combined to form one class each and a number of skilled and operative classes which the 1931 and 1936 Census experiences proved impossible to separate have been grouped together as “Other Occupations in”, followed by the name of the product group, e.g., “Other Occupations in Foods”. The individual terms used in the 1931 Classification have been revised and supplemented by additional terms. Such sources as the British Dictionary of Occupational Terms (1927), and the United States Dictionary of Occupational Titles, Parts I and II (1939) have been used extensively in assigning the individual terms.

The classification as here set up is in the main the resultant of the relative importance attached to the necessities of historical comparison, to the need of devising a structure capable of fitting the quality of occupational data characteristic of census taking, and to the desirability of modifying procedure to meet such changes as have taken place in the occupational field during the past decennial period.

INSTRUCTIONS TO CODING CLERKS

General.—The occupation of each gainfully occupied person will be coded from information given in Column 31 of the Population Schedule. The occupation code number will be entered in the Column headed "Occ." immediately following Column 34 on the Schedule.

In assigning code numbers to the occupation returns appearing on the Schedules, the coder will consult the Alphabetical Index of Occupations. When an occupation term is found, the code number opposite it will indicate to what class in the Classified Index of Occupations it belongs. The coder should then refer to the Classified Index to ascertain the title of the corresponding class and to determine from the other occupation terms listed under it whether the return being coded properly belongs to this class. After this has been done the code number will be entered on the Schedule. Never code from the Alphabetical Index alone.

Occupation Symbols.—Each occupation designation is represented by a 3-digit code symbol. The first figure represents one of the Main ^{Occupation} Industry Groups listed on page 13, as "0" Agriculture, "4" Construction, etc. The symbol "0" in the third Column has been reserved for some of the numerically more important occupations, e.g., "²⁷⁰₂₈₀" Mechanics, "430" Carpenters, etc.

Word Order.—For the most part, occupation terms have been printed in their natural order, i.e., in the form they are found in common practice, e.g., "Cabinet finisher", "Paper sorter", "Golf club maker", etc. Though the list of occupational designations included in the present volume is quite extensive, it does not completely cover the variety of ways in which occupational descriptions may be returned on the Population Schedule. A limited number of terms have, therefore, been listed both in the natural and in the inverted order, e.g. "Bricklayer's apprentice" and "Apprentice bricklayer". If an occupation return expressed by more than one word is not found listed in the expected order, it should be sought under each of the other words in the complete description.

On the other hand, particularly in the case of machine operators, a separate designation has not always been given for each of several ways of returning the same occupation, e.g., "Beader" may be found to cover also "Beader operator" and "Beading machine operator". Similarly, on the industry side "Textiles mfg." covers "Cotton mfg.", "Silk mfg.", etc.

Alphabetical Order.—The listing of terms in both the Classified and the Alphabetical Index is according to strict alphabetical order. To illustrate, in the case of "Can filler", "Canner" and "Can opener", the first three letters being the same, the fourth letter determines the alphabetical position. Words in brackets are used to qualify what immediately precedes and are disregarded in making the alphabetical arrangement.

Abbreviations.—A list of abbreviations used is given on page 11. For the most part these are self-explanatory. The general distinction between "n.e.s." (not elsewhere specified), and "n.s." (not stated) should be observed. The qualification "n.e.s." covers those cases where the item returned is not listed in some other form in the Index. The qualification "n.s." indicates that the occupation itself has not been more specifically described in the Population Schedule. Never give an occupation return an "n.e.s." or "n.s." symbol until you have exhausted every available resource in trying to find out to what specified group it belongs.

Incomplete Entries.—Entries in Column 31 for the occupation may be incomplete, e.g., "Cutter" may be entered instead of "Cloth cutter", "Leather cutter", etc. Often the industry description in Columns 32 and 33 may contain the missing data, as for example "Cutter—Leather shoes—Mfg." from which it might be inferred that the occupation was "Leather cutter". Thus in many cases where the occupation description in Column 31 is not sufficiently complete the occupations can be inferred from the industry. This applies likewise, in the case of such general terms as "Clerk", "Employee", "Worker", etc. However, all doubtful cases must be brought to the attention of the supervisor.

Status.—The letters E, OA, and W appear quite freely in both the Classified and the Alphabetical Index of Occupations. Where the distinctions are made they attempt to separate primarily persons in a managerial capacity and persons following an occupation or trade. In general, the former are coded to their respective "Owners and Managers" classes, the latter to their trade. For example, whenever the letter E follows such an occupation as "Builder", "Contractor", "Mover" it indicates that should such terms appear on the Schedule with the letter E in Column 34 they are to be coded to the "Owners and Managers" group concerned. Skilled tradesmen returning E will, however, be coded to their trade, e.g., "Blacksmith E" would be coded to 241 not 200, "Carpenter E" to 430 not 400, etc., ~~unless there is evidence they are serving in a managerial capacity only and not following their trade.~~ But "Gardener E" and "Gardener OA" are coded to 000 while "Gardener W" is coded to 090. A number of persons, chiefly in Agriculture, Trade, and Service, will be returned with the symbol NP in Column 34. They will be treated as though the entry were W. A list of the status designations that can be used correctly with each occupation class will be furnished each coder and should be consulted frequently.

Consistency Between Occupation and Industry.—The coder must be sure that the occupation code and the industry code are consistent. This applies particularly in the case of persons returning status E and OA, for here the occupation is often dependent on the industry. In the case of wage-earners, there is not the same degree of dependency between occupation and industry and combinations of occupations and industry which would not be possible for employers and persons on own account will be found and coded as found. However, when the coder encounters an improbable combination he will consult his supervisor before applying the code.

Coders must learn thoroughly the contents of the classes in the Classification of Industries. Frequently such expressions as "Metal Mfg.", "Rubber goods mfg.", are found on the industry side of the Alphabetical Index of Occupations. This makes it necessary for coders to be familiar with the metal-working, the rubber goods, and other industry groups if they are to assign the proper code numbers to the information on the schedules.

Material Worked In.—It is essential that coders realize how much correct coding will depend upon ascertaining the material worked in. In some cases the occupation description will be sufficient, e.g., where a person is returned as a "Metal grinder" or "Leather cutter". However, in many cases the coder will have to look to the entries in the industry columns for the necessary information to determine the code number. A "Polisher" in "Brass mfg." will be considered a metal polisher, a "Turner" in "Furniture mfg." a wood turner, and so on. In some industries, e.g., "Shipbuilding", where such workers may be working in wood or metal, much care will be necessary in selecting the more probable chance. Where the Alphabetical Index has not covered any one of these the supervisor should be consulted.

Two or More Occupations.—Sometimes two or more occupations may be entered in Column 31. Unless the returns in the industry, employment, and earnings columns give evidence to the contrary, the first entry will be assumed to describe the main occupation and this will be used in assigning the occupation code.

Lodging and Boarding Houses.—On Schedules where there are lodgers or boarders in excess of the number of persons in the family and no person on the Schedule is returned as a "Lodging house keeper", the head of the household, or, if the head is returned as following a gainful occupation, his wife or near female relative is to be coded occupationally to "Lodging and boarding house keepers" and industrially to "Hotels and lodging houses". Any other relatives returned as engaged in home duties are also to be coded as employed in a lodging house.

Homemakers.—Housewives who were not gainfully occupied at the time of the 1941 Census nor at the time of the 1931 Census will not be coded. Those gainfully occupied at either of these two census dates will be coded in Columns 31 and 35 but in these two Columns only.

Sex and Age.—Cases where females have been returned as following occupations usually restricted to males, e.g., as "Bricklayers", "Furnacemen", etc. are to be referred to the supervisor. Great care should be exercised in this regard as at the time of the 1941 Census enumeration and particularly in war industries many women will be found following such predominantly male occupations as "Welders" and "Riveters" and are correctly coded to such classes. Similarly, where young persons are reported as following an occupation such as a profession or a skilled trade inconsistent with their age, such cases are to be referred to the supervisor.

Owners and Managers and Foremen.—The "Owners and Managers" and "Foremen" classes in a number of main occupation groups have been greatly condensed by qualifying the occupation terms by the industry code symbols rather than by the individual industries e.g., 400 Manager—Const. (Ind. 500-590), 200 Manager—Mfg. (Ind. 301-493), etc. Consequently to code the occupations in these two classes correctly the coder must be familiar with the industry classification. Thus in the illustration just cited a manager employed in any construction industry covered by the code numbers 500 to 590 inclusive in the classified sections of the Classification of Industries would be coded 400, whereas one in any manufacturing industry 200. In coding any occupation qualified in this manner in the Classification of Occupations it is first essential that the coder find the correct code symbol in the Classification of Industries and then determine the correct occupation code.

Managers of Departments.—Managers of special departments of an industry are assigned to the occupation class indicated by the department, not by the industry. "Sales managers—Auto. mfg." would be coded to 610 not 200, "Advertising manager—Radio mfg." to 622 not 200.

Public Service Officials.—Though the list of public officials in the class 758 of the Classified Index is by no means exhaustive it does indicate that the practice to be followed is to include in this class only those whose duties are of such special character that they cannot be classified elsewhere. A "Patent examiner" is coded to 758, whereas a "Geologist" in Public Service, for example, is coded to 749. It should be observed that a special class has been provided for government inspectors.

Farmers.—Farmers will include only those for whom the letters E or OA have been entered in Column 34. A farmer with status W or NP will be considered as farm labourer unless other evidence establishes him as a farm operator.

Labourers.—Codors are referred to the Introduction for an explanation of the way the occupation "Labourer" will be coded to the Classification.

Apprentices.—Apprentices to the skilled trades are to be coded to the occupation or trade to which apprenticed. With a few exceptions, apprentices to professional occupations are to be coded to "Other Professional Occupations" 749.

Doubtful Cases.—The coder must refer all doubtful cases immediately to his supervisor and no one else. Good coding will depend largely on the willingness to ask questions. Moreover, such a practice helps the supervisor to learn the most frequent sources of difficulty and to take these up with all coders.

Descriptions Not Listed.—Codors must report all occupation descriptions not in the Alphabetical Index to the supervisor. Likewise, they must consult the supervisor before coding an occupation return to the unspecified class. Any additions to the list will be made only after they have been authorized as useful contribution.

Legibility.—All code symbols must be written clearly on the Schedules so that they may not be mistaken for other figures. A carelessly made 0 will often resemble 6, a 6 may look like 4 or 1, 4 like 9 or 7, 3 like B, etc. Accurate punching is dependent to a considerable extent on careful writing.
